President's Message

I hope many of our Maryland State Numismatic Association (MSNA) club members got a chance to visit Philadelphia and participate in the annual national American Numismatic Association (ANA) convention and all the associated numismatic history, exhibits, meetings, etc. Having the renown and largest coin show of the year so close is not a regular occurrence. I was extremely glad that the MSNA could play a role in helping our state collector base take advantage of the relative proximity of the ANA convention. We were able to lease a van, provide a driver and get a number of our members safely to the Philadelphia ANA convention and back. MSNA is a state organization and it is always nice to be able to help our members and member clubs. I did not personally take this van to the ANA but word has it that all who participated were very pleased with the transportation arrangements. Having said this, I must give a great note of thanks to Jack Schadegg, one of our board members and former President who championed and planned the ANA trip. Not only did he set up the trip plan, leased the vehicle, and made sure we had the necessary insurance, but he was the driver who picked up our member club folks at the two Maryland stops and got everyone to the ANA and home safe and sound. Way to go Jack!!!! Many thanks for a job well done. As you know all organizations rely on volunteers to get things done. MSNA is no different. Jack did an amazing job with some help from a few other volunteers. MSNA is an ANA life member club and it was great to have a good showing. There were other MSNA members who attended the convention. Many of these folks were at the convention for multiple days.

It is worthy of note that one of our MSNA member clubs will celebrate its fortieth anniversary in 2019. The Maryland Token and Medal Society (MD TAMS) was founded in 1979. If you have an interest in tokens, medals and other Maryland exonumia, this organization may be perfect for you and your collecting interests. MD TAMS will be issuing commemorative poker chips for its members to commemorate its 40 years of service to the Maryland collecting community. You may want to consider joining MD TAMS. An application/information may be found at http://www.mdtams.org.

Obituary

Willard Royal Mumford, MSNA life member 16, passed away June 4, 2018 at the age of 84. A professor of engineering, he was active in a number of educational and volunteer organizations. He was president of MSNA from 1981-83 after serving as treasurer in 1980-81. William was also a guest lecturer at the MSNA education forum multiple times. He also served as an officer of the Colonial Coin Club and the Utah Numismatic Society, and long-time editor of the Civil War Token Society and Maryland

Tokens and Medals Society journals. One of his MSNA talks concerned his archeological dig at 10 Cornhill Street in Annapolis, which he believed to be the home to John Chalmers' silver smithy in colonial/early republic times. Will Mumford found a rare Chalmers three pence there (see cover photo for a similar piece).

Why Not Try Some "Silver" Dollars from North of the Border?

Mark Benvenuto, MSNA #R-825

When it comes to the silver dollars of the United States, we might want to describe the output that spans over a century as "Dickensian" – meaning it was the best of times and it was the worst of times. We have had two series of silver dollars, the Morgan and the Peace, that saw tremendous mintages for some time, and saw a rising collector love affair long after they were out of circulation. As well, we have a multi-year attempt at an international trade dollar. That's the best of times. The worst might be the way we sort of stumbled from a Rip van Winkle decades-long period of no silver dollars at all to a silver dollar that never had silver in it for circulation – the Eisenhower – to a small thing few wanted – the Susan B. Anthony. It's tough to build much of a collection when it comes to the Ikes or the Suzies, simply because there are only seven years of the first and four years of the latter. So why not widen our collecting gaze a bit, and look to the silver dollars of our northern neighbors? Or maybe we should say, look to the nickel dollars.

O, Canada? Ah, Canada.

After an abortive attempt to issue a dollar coin for George V's coronation, Canada got into the silver dollar business right as we were getting out of it, in 1935 (commemorating George V's silver anniversary on the throne). And for those of us who want that particular collecting challenge, by all means, try it and enjoy! But the Canadian "silver" dollars we're going to focus on are those starting in 1968, when Canada decided the Royal Canadian Mint (RCM) would switch from the precious metal to pure nickel – similar to what several other nations did at about the same time.

The new nickel dollars continued to sport the Arnold Machin image of the queen wearing a tiara that Canada first used in 1965. It was the second of what has since become an impressively long line of images of Queen Elizabeth II as she aged through her record-breaking long reign. They also continued to be known as Voyageur dollars, because of the well-established image of the merchant and native guide paddling a canoe which dominates the reverse.

Why Canada went from silver to pure nickel, while other countries such as the U.S. went to a copper-nickel alloys, well, it's a matter of what's right there domestically. Canada has a lot of nickel. Oh, the United States has some as well, but Canada has remained one of the world's leading nickel producers for decades. Indeed, the nickel refinery at Sudbury, Ontario was one of the major producers of this metal for the Allies during World War II, when it was needed for a wide variety of military applications. So, with so much nickel being easily available, the RCM went to "silver" dollars that were 99.9% nickel.

Although the Voyageurs continued their decades-long paddle right through the change in metals, the RCM continued a tradition that started right at the beginning of their silver dollars — making circulating commemoratives. The first-year (1935) silver dollar was designed to be a circulating commemorative, as a good look at the obverse legends will prove. With the new nickel silver dollars, it was 1970 that saw the first of the commemorative reverses, honoring Manitoba. There would be others as well, in 1971 for British Columbia, in 1973 for Prince Edward Island, in 1974 for Winnipeg, and after a few years of the resumed Voyageur reverse, commemorative reverses again in 1982 and 1984.

Now in a wonderfully interesting twist, even though these commemorative reverses were placed on coins made to circulate, they were also made in proof versions for inclusion in RCM proof sets. That means there are some excellent pieces out there that a collector might find, in many cases as single coins. These are examples that come from some broken up mint set, but that certainly does not detract from their beauty.

Speaking of beauty, another truly beautiful aspect of assembling a collection of these nickel silver dollars is their prices. They're cheap. Yes, we could gild the lily and come up with other terms for it, but these dollar coins never cost much. Perhaps it's because the number of folks collecting Canadian coins is lower than those who gravitate to U.S. material. Perhaps it's because very few of these have been pursued at some high level, and thus not that many of them have ever been certified and slabbed. Whatever the reason though, if you have never looked at this series, you'd be surprised what you might be able to land for nothing more than $10 per coin. That's a great coin for a great price, multiplied over several years.

The voyageurs who had paddled onto the nickel dollars from the earlier silver dollars and paddled onward so dutifully for just over 50 years finally came to the end of their journey in 1987, when the coin was made smaller still, changed in composition to include a brass plating, and the loon was introduced as the reverse design because a reverse die of the voyageur design was lost or stolen. Okay, there was something of a last hurrah for the coin that year, at least in the form of sales to collectors. But it was no longer used as a circulating piece, unlike the new and beloved loonie.

That might have been the end of the story, except for the most fascinating reprise, which came about in 2003 – and which just came about again in 2017. In 2003, as a means of honoring Queen Elizabeth's 50th year on the throne, the Voyageur reverse was paired with an updated obverse, and 30,000 of them were made available in sterling silver. The dollar switched to brass-plated steel in 2012 to match the rest of Canada's circulating coinage which had switched to plated steel at least a decade earlier. In 2017, as a thirtieth commemorative of the loon reverse, the voyageurs again paddled out of history, this time in silver, gold, and a myriad of different colorized versions – the last not always through the RCM. Overall, these are neat bows to a great coin, but we shouldn't feel we have to have them to complete a collection. The nickel silver dollars of 1968 – 1986 make a tremendous collection by themselves, and at a tremendous price. There are only twenty-two different date/type combinations of seven different designs. If you've never looked at these dollars of our northern friends before, now might be a very good time to start.

Coins that are the Cat's Meow

by Simcha Kuritzky, NLG

In 1988, the Pobjoy Mint capitalized on the growing popularity of the house cat by producing a series of coins portraying a different breed or color variation of cat each year. These coins are legal tender in the Isle of Man, famous for their tailless Manx cats. Man had already issued coins portraying Manx cats as a crown (five shillings) in 1970 and 25 new pence in 1975, then as a new penny (which actually circulates) in 1980. These coins are available inexpensively in base metal (copper-nickel) and as one ounce pure silver coins. Starting in 2004, both silver and base metal crowns were sold with the cat's portrait in color. They were minted in even fractions of a Troy ounce of pure precious metal: 1/25, 1/10, 1/5, 1/2 and 1 ounce .9999 fine gold and platinum. The 1/25 ounce was especially designed for jewelry, although the one ounce gold and silver coins also appear in pendants for cat fanciers. The mintages of these coins were limited, anywhere from 250 of the early copper-nickel proof crowns, to 50,000 of the silver crowns.

The first year's coins portrayed three symbols of Man: a large Manx cat standing right, a tiny shield with a triskeles (three legs joined at the hip) at top, and in the background, Douglas Bay with two tiny sea birds flying above the cat and a distant Tower of Refuge rising out the water to the right. Most coins were produced with a proof finish but those gold coins produced with a satin finish are identified by a U inside a raised circle symbol off to one side on each coin. All subsequent years' coins replaced the Tower of Refuge with a small Manx cat on a pedestal, but retained the water, sea birds, and triskeles shield.

The series has a few special coins. Platinum coins were introduced in 1989 for the Persian cat, and only became an annual issue in 1992 for the Japanese Bobtail. Since Siamese cats are an especially popular breed, their coin in 1992 was also made in 5 and 10 ounce silver. For the tenth coin issue in 1997, the Pobjoy Mint produced a ten ounce silver coin with ten 1/25 ounce gold coins embedded. Starting at the top and going clockwise are the first ten breeds: Manx, Persian, New York alley (domestic short hair), Norwegian forest, Siamese, Maine coon, Japanese bobtail, Turkish van, Burmese (Malayan), and long-hair smoke. In the center is a large copy of the Manx cat portrait. Only 1,997 of these ten crown coins were minted. The silver coin is proof with a 75mm diameter, while the gold coins have a regular finish.

The 1990 domestic shorthair coin won Krause Publication's Coin of the Year Award for Most Popular Coin. The series ended in 2016. The breeds and color variations honored since 1998 are (in sequence) the Birman, British Blue (blue-gray colored European Shorthair), Scottish fold, Somali, Bengal, Balinese, Tonkinese, Himalayan, exotic shorthair, ragdoll, Burmilla, Chinchilla (silver colored European Shorthair), Abyssinian, Angora, Manx mother and kitten for the 25th anniversary in 2012, Siberian, Snowshoe, Selkirk Rex, and Tobacco Brown (Havana). The early issues all show posed portraits. Starting in 1999, the artists at the Pobjoy Mint started using more natural poses as well as multiple cats. All 21st Century coins show either two or three kittens, or a mother and one or two kittens. Although there are over forty recognized breeds and even more color variations, the series ended after 29 issues.

What's Your Sign?

Part Forty: Slovakian medals

by Simcha Kuritzky, NLG

The Kremnica Mint in Slovakia has produced an interesting set of medals (they call them jetons). They are 27mm brass weighing between 7 and 8 grams. All have the same reverse: the twelve signs (same as those shown on the obverses of the twelve medals) around the outside of a mini-solar system). There is a sun with a face in the center, surrounded by one circular and four elliptical orbits with a small planet on each.

At the bottom is a circular logo with the initials dt'. It appears that 12 o'clock is supposed to be January 1 with the Capricorn symbol, proceeding clockwise.

Zoc	liac Sign	Slovak Name	Figure
φ	Aries	BARAN	Ram with large horns facing
П	Gemini	BLÍŽENCI	Man and woman clasping
ල	Cancer	RAK	Lobster with claws up
N	Leo	LEV	Lion seated right
m	Virgo	PANNA	Naked woman seated left
८	Libra	VÁHY	Balance scales
M,	Scorpio	ŠKORPIÓN	Scorpion with claws up
X	Sagittarius	STRELEC	Man with bow and arrow
1/3	Capricorn	KOZOROŽEC	Ibex standing left
	Aquarius	VODNÁR	Mermaid holding trident
¥	Pisces	RYBY	Two fish head to tail

The obverse of each medal has the sign with a small sigil and the name in Slovak below.

They are still for sale on www.mint.sk/nakup.php?code=670166 followed by the letters a through l.
